

Aaron Picard
AS 155

The Gold Year

Thursday 6:27 P.M.

Fwoosh, Aaron shot a fireball at the enemy. Aaron went on one knee and put his hands out for a boost. Tamara came sprinting towards Aaron, and Aaron gave her a boost. She summoned three fireballs and shot them at the enemy.

18 Hours Earlier

Call was the last one. He walked through the gate thinking, "I'm a gold year student now." Right when Call walked through the gate, Tamara exclaimed "Let's go over by the gallery and celebrate." They started walking to the gallery. They stepped into the gallery and there was no one in it.

"This place is deserted," Aaron said. "Probably because it's so late." replied Tamra. "Ooh, ooh, ooh, Call can you make us an air movie?" Tamara asked. "What movie?" Call asked. "Star Wars." Tamara quickly responded. "I'll do my best. I only learned this last month." Call said sighing.

Call walked over to the stool in the back of the room. Aaron and Tamara went and sat in nice, cushioned movie theater chairs. "Awhhhh" said Aaron and Tamara in harmony. "Here we go!" said Call.

Call started moving his finger around creating an image of the movie. When Call was one hour into the movie, Tamara and Aaron were out cold.

"Why do I even bother" said Call, stopping moving his fingers. Right after that Aaron woke up. Call wasn't surprised Tamara didn't wake up because she's the deepest sleeper Call knows.

Call made a motion, telling Aaron to come to him. "Let's dump a bucket of water on Tamara's head from the pool over there." Call said. "Good idea" replied Aaron. They hurried over to the pool and grabbed a bucket hoping Tamara didn't wake up. They filled up the bucket with water.

Slowly they walked over to Tamara watching every step. They were so quiet, you could hear a pin drop. They went behind her, and turned the bucket over her head. "OH MY GOSH! What is wrong with you guys, you scared me! You guys are so immature!" Tamara screamed "Geez, you're such a killjoy. Ya know, you probably just single handedly woke up the whole entire school." Call said back to Tamara. "You scared me so much I had a nightmare that I was drowning." replied Tamara.

"We should probably hit the hay." Aaron said breaking the awkward silence. They started walking towards their room. When they got to the room, they weren't really expecting anything different in this room than the other four rooms. "Halleluiah!" Call said staring at the giant flat screen across from the giant couch. They saw their names encrusted with diamonds on the doors to their room. They went in to go to sleep and it hit Call's eye, a golden running water toilet. "Yesssss!" Call exclaimed. "That probably woke up the whole school." Tamara muttered under her breath.

Call set his alarm clock 30 minutes early that night, so he could get dressed and watch some television. He dropped down on his bed and instantly fell asleep.

Beep, beep, beep . . . beep, beep, SLAM! Call whacked the alarm clock. He woke up, got dressed, and left the room. He grabbed the golden remote control, propped himself on the couch, and turned on the television Call started scrolling through the channels. "Ooohh, the Simpsons." Call said. Call started watching it. After the episode, Tamara and Aaron came out of their rooms.

"Let's start walking to class." Tamara said. "Alright" Call responded. They were walking down the hall just about to pass the hallway to the mission gate when something caught Call's eye. Call said "Look" pointing at a strange figure limping down the hallway in a robe. The mysterious figure looked up at them. "He's coming for you and nobody can stop him." He said to the three kids.

They ran up to the strange man. Tamara then said in a worried voice "Who's coming?" "J . . ." was what the man said before he dropped dead. They opened his robe to see his face and it was burned and covered in scars. "What happened to him?" Call asked. "I don't know . . . maybe he was attacked by who he was talking about, and he just escaped with his life, long enough to warn us." Aaron replied. "We have to tell Master Rufus." Tamara said.

They started sprinting towards their class. When they got there, Master Rufus was there enjoying breakfast. "Oh, you're early. How's that metal thing we put in your leg working?" Master Rufus asked. "There was a man who warned us . . . someone is coming for us . . . and he can't be stopped." Call said panting frantically. "Who?" Master Rufus demanded. "All he got out was J." said Aaron panting. "Master Joseph, he wants revenge for what you did to him!"

Aaron, Call, Tamara, and Master Rufus went to go check out the body. Master Rufus had one quick look at the body's face and blurted out, "This is Master North . . . hold on, Master Joseph can be here any second! Stay here. I have to go get something I rarely use." He quickly teleported to his room. About 30 seconds later he teleported back.

He was holding three black wrist bands. "Put these on and you are able to do chaos magic." Master Rufus said. Almost immediately after they put them on, the mission gate door exploded.

Master Joseph was slowly walking through the debris. He had a silver mask covering his face. "You killed Master North!" Master Rufus scolded. He summoned a fireball, immediately after he was surrounded by chaos magic. "Avenge me!" were Master Rufus' last words.

"You killed him!" Call yelled. He shot a fireball at Master Joseph, but it was surrounded by chaos magic. Master Joseph was walking closer, he got to about 15 feet and stopped. "Look at what you did to me!" Master Joseph said, taking off his mask, revealing scars and one giant scar going across his whole body. "Now, it's time for my payback." said Master Joseph.

Master Joseph raised his arms, and boiling lava shot out of the ground and towards Aaron, Call and Tamara. Tamara summoned a rock wall to stop the lava. "This will only hold for so long." Tamara said. Call eyed the wristband that Master Rufus used to teleport. "I have an idea. If you guys create a distraction, I can pin him against the wall with a giant rock. You guys hold it there. I can take the teleporting band to go get the magic binding gauntlet. We can bind his magic." Call said "Good idea," said Aaron. "Let's do this!" said Call.

They lowered the wall and they surrounded the lava with chaos magic. Then Aaron shot a fireball at Master Joseph knocking him off balance. Aaron went on a knee and gave Tamara a boost. She shot three fireballs at Master Joseph. Call shot Master Joseph against the wall. Aaron and Tamara put in all of their effort to hold him against the wall, while Call teleported to the chamber holding the gauntlet. He grabbed it and left. Call put it on and started to bind Master Joseph's magic.

After they were done, they took him to the nearest jail. When they got back to the Magisterium they went to sleep. They slept well knowing they were safe... for now.

The End